

ABSTRACT

Methods of determining the effectiveness of anti-inflammatory compounds in reducing incidence of myocardial infarction are described. Methods of prophylaxis against myocardial infarctions which exhibit CK-MB levels greater than about 50 nano-grams/ml in a subject are also provided.